*Education and Training Level (E & T Codes)

- 1. Occupations that generally or always require full-time study beyond a bachelor's degree. These occupations may require a professional degree, a doctoral degree, or a master's degree. Occupations in this category include lawyers, biological scientists, and vocational counselors.
- 2. Occupations that generally require work experience in an occupation requiring a bachelor's degree or higher degree. Most occupations in this category are managerial occupations that require experience in a related nonmanagerial occupation. Occupations in this category include marketing, advertising and public relations managers, and medicine and health services managers.
- 3. Occupations that generally require a bachelor's degree. Most workers in these occupations have completed at least four but not more than five years of full-time academic work after high school. The bachelor's degree is considered the minimum education requirement for most professional occupations, such as mechanical engineer and elementary school teacher.
- 4. Occupations that generally require an associate's degree. Completion of this degree program usually requires at least two years of full-time academic work after high school. Many occupations in this training category are health related, such as dental hygienist, respiratory therapist and radiological technologist. Also included are assorted technicians and paralegals.
- 5. Occupations that generally require completion of vocational training provided in postsecondary vocational schools before hiring as well as occupations that generally require on-the-job training or some combination of on-the-job training and informal training to achieve average job performance. Occupations in this category include a variety of apprenticeable occupations such as truck driver, travel agent, police officer, secretary, welder, and nurse's aide.
- 6. Occupations that generally require skills developed through work experience in a related occupation. Occupations in this group include cost estimators, police detectives, construction supervisors, and food service and lodging managers.
